

This example is showing you how to use Chicago Footnotes Referencing Style.

You will notice that when I want to include a quotation I will place it in double inverted commas like this example and then follow it with a citation. “It’s clear, right from the beginning of the Bible that God created us to be attached to others.”<sup>1</sup> Other times I might want to paraphrase or summarise a text. If that is the case I do not need to put the information in double inverted commas since it is not an exact copy, but I still need to reference it. For example, Grenz agrees that God’s valuing of community and relationship is a central theme in the narrative of Scripture and is seen right from the start of the Bible in Genesis 2.<sup>2</sup>

Walton also argues that the importance placed in the creation story on relationships is valid; that both men and women are “equal in [God’s] sight by virtue of creation”<sup>3</sup> This should be an encouragement to us all!

---

<sup>1</sup> Timothy E. Clinton and Joshua Straub, God Attachment : Why You Believe, Act, and Feel the Way You Do About God, 1st Howard Books hardcover ed. (New York: Howard Books, 2010), 3.

<sup>2</sup> Stanley J. Grenz, Theology for the Community of God (Grand Rapids, Mich.: W.B. Eerdmans, 2000), 112-13.

<sup>3</sup> Woodrow E. Walton, "Side by Side," Priscilla Papers 26, no. 4 (2012): 11.

Bibliography

Clinton, Timothy E., and Joshua Straub. God Attachment : Why You Believe, Act, and Feel the Way You Do About God. 1st Howard Books hardcover ed. New York: Howard Books, 2010.

Grenz, Stanley J. Theology for the Community of God. Grand Rapids, Mich.: W.B. Eerdmans, 2000.

Walton, Woodrow E. "Side by Side." Priscilla Papers 26, no. 4 (2012): 10-11.